LOOK

Pick one from each row:

Presence: precision-weaponized warmth | fluent in every register of professional language | making the data feel personal

Age: indeterminate in a way that reads as competence | young enough to know how the platforms work | old enough to remember when they didn't

Eyes: always slightly ahead of the conversation | measuring engagement metrics in real time | briefly human, between meetings

Build: aerodynamic | tightly efficient | the posture of someone who retains everything from very long presentations

Outfit: minimal, precise, expensive | everything chosen for what it communicates | perfectly appropriate, aggressively so

Tell: "So the data shows..." | enthusiasm about a concept that actively harms cinema | the genuine moment of doubt she immediately converts into a takeaway

BACKGROUND

Pick one.

THE CONVERT

You used to believe in cinema—you have a degree from a film school you no longer mention. When you invoke your buried artistic instincts to push back against pure commercialism, take +1 forward and give your opponent a reason to like you.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you knows about my film school past?
- Which of you thinks I'm a sellout?
- Which of you has seen me genuinely moved by a film?
- Which of you has asked me what I actually like?

THE PLATFORM NATIVE

You speak the language of every tech platform better than anyone in this building. When you translate a studio problem into digital strategy, the conversation either accelerates or derails—you choose which.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you learned something from me they'd rather not have known?
- Which of you thinks I'm a fad?
- Which of you has asked me to run numbers on something personal?
- Which of you has actually listened to what the data said?

THE REALITY CHECK

Everyone here needs someone willing to say the hard thing. When you deliver a genuinely devastating assessment of a project—correct, brutal, and helpful—take +2 to your next Parley move in this scene.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you needed to hear what I said?
- Which of you came back and admitted I was right?
- Which of you hated me for a week after I said it?
- Which of you is still angry?

STARTING MOVES

THE BOTTOM LINE

When you present data, engagement metrics, or market analysis to support a position, roll +INT. On a 10+, the argument is won—it takes the CEO to override you. On a 7-9, the argument is won, but someone accuses you of missing the point entirely.

TED TALK MODE

When you explain a complex problem using jargon, frameworks, and total confidence, roll +CHA. On a 10+, everyone believes it applies to the situation at hand. On a 7-9, the convincing people are convinced, and the unconvinced are more so.

AUDIENCE RESEARCH

When you spend time analyzing someone's patterns—professional or personal—ask the GM one question about what they actually want versus what they say they want.

THE VETO

Once per session, veto any creative decision on the grounds of "it won't track." This forces a roll: the creator rolls +CHA vs. your +INT. Whoever wins takes the room.

ADVANCES

- Disruption: Once per session, reframe a creative failure as a strategic opportunity. Everyone in the room gains +1 forward on the new direction.
- The Pivot: When a project tanks, you are never associated with it—you saw this coming, you said so, it's all in the email.
- Quantified Humanity: When you apply data-driven thinking to a genuinely human problem and it actually works, take +2 forward on all subsequent moves this session.
- Slap: Once per session, declare something "doesn't slap." That project is dead. No one can revive it until next session.
- Improved Stat: Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

- Make a genuinely human creative decision and own it.
- Tell someone the truth about the numbers even when the truth is good.
- Defend something that doesn't have data behind it.
- Admit, to yourself, that you miss the movie you thought you'd make.

LOOK

BACKGROUND

Pick one.

THE CRITIC'S APPRENTICE

You spent years assistant-editing for a revered, deeply unemployed film critic. You can quote Pauline Kael in a budget meeting. When you cite film history to make an artistic argument in a crisis, take +1 forward.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you thinks my taste is genuinely good?
- Which of you has heard me say "this one's for the art" and watched it bomb?
- Which of you saw me approve a sequel and said nothing?
- Which of you is responsible for the first time I compromised?

THE FILMMAKER WHO PIVOTED

You made one brilliant, deeply unprofitable film and have been explaining why that qualifies you for this role ever since. When you invoke your one great film to earn someone's trust or cooperation, roll +CHA. On a 10+, it works. On a 7-9, it works, but someone mentions the box office number.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has actually seen my film?
- Which of you keeps asking when my next one is coming?
- Which of you thinks I sold out?
- Which of you told the CEO about my Rotten Tomatoes score?

THE TRUE BELIEVER

You genuinely think movies can change lives. This makes you excellent at your job and completely vulnerable to people who know it. When you articulate why a specific film matters—to a room, to a director, to anyone—take +2 forward to your next Likability roll.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you still believes what I believe?
- Which of you has used my passion to get what they wanted?
- Which of you thinks my idealism is dangerous?
- Which of you envies me for it?

THE PRODIGY OVEREXTENDED

You were promoted three years faster than you should have been. The instincts are excellent; the experience is not. When you admit you don't know something and ask for help, the person you ask gives you a genuine answer—no games.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you trained me without realizing it?
- Which of you covered for a mistake I don't know I made?
- Which of you is jealous of my title?
- Which of you thinks I'll be fired within the year?

STARTING MOVES

THE LIKABILITY TRAP

You carry a Likability resource (starts at 3). When you spend 1 Likability, a talent, director, or difficult executive does what you want—no roll required. If Likability reaches 0, you are a spineless suit in everyone’s eyes until you earn it back.

ENCYCLOPEDIA

When you name-drop a director, film, or movement to support your argument, roll +INT. On a 10+, no one can challenge your cultural authority on this. On a 7-9, it lands, but someone more respected contradicts you later.

EARN IT BACK

When you stand firm against an artistic compromise and it costs you something real, regain 1 Likability.

GUT FEELING

Once per session, greenlight something purely on instinct. Tell the GM what kind of film it is. Ask them one question about what happens next.

TAKE THE NOTE

When a talent or director gives you humiliating, unsolicited feedback and you absorb it without flinching, take +2 forward.

ADVANCES

- The Auteur's Ally: When you champion a risky project, on a 7+ the creative team gains +1 ongoing for the production.
- Double Back: Once per session, reverse a decision you've already made. No one questions it.
- Legendary Likability: Your Likability maximum increases to 5.
- No Notes: Once per session, refuse any creative note from below the CEO level. They accept it—this time.
- Name the Film: When you're uncertain, name the film that prepared you for this. Take +1 forward and shrug off the next social setback.
- Improved Stat: Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

- Greenlight a film that has no business getting made and make it work.
- Stand between a great director and someone trying to ruin their vision.
- Get through an entire meeting without referencing Kubrick.
- Admit you were wrong to someone you've genuinely disappointed.

Outfit: loud tie, expensive shoes | business casual but somehow wrong | overdressed for this specific meeting

Tell: the laugh that is also a pivot | solving problems he created | speaking in extremely confident half-truths

BACKGROUND

Pick one.

THE BEST FRIEND

You've been best friends with someone powerful since before they were powerful. Loyalty is your currency and your blindspot. When you act to protect a specific named ally—declare them at character creation—take +1 forward.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you have I covered for without being asked?
- Which of you thinks I'm too loyal?
- Which of you has watched me lie to protect someone who didn't deserve it?
- Which of you has used that loyalty against me?

THE TALENT WHISPERER

Difficult people become manageable around you. When you intervene to calm, distract, or redirect a talent in crisis, roll +CHA. On a 10+, the crisis passes and they like you more than before. On a 7-9, the crisis passes, but you've made a promise you'll need to keep.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has seen me talk someone off a ledge—professional or literal?
- Which of you has benefited from my reputation with talent?
- Which of you knows the worst thing I did to smooth something over?
- Which of you doesn't trust me, and is right?

THE STUDIO SURVIVOR

You've outlasted three restructurings and four heads of production. When you Defy Danger using the fact that everyone in this building needs you for something, take +1 forward.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has worked with me longer than anyone else here?
- Which of you is the reason I'm still here?
- Which of you tried to get me fired once?
- Which of you thinks I'm the most dangerous person in this building?

STARTING MOVES

CHAOTIC NEUTRAL ENABLER

When you resolve a crisis through an unorthodox method, roll +CHA. On a 10+, it works, and only you know what you actually did. On a 7-9, it works, but choose one: you've created a secondary crisis, you now owe someone, or they saw exactly what you did.

POPULAR WITH TALENT

When you reach out to a creative person—director, actor, writer—for a favor, roll +CHA. On a 10+, they do it, happily. On a 7-9, they do it, but mention it to three other people.

WEASEL ROOM

When a situation deteriorates and you were involved in making it worse, you may exit cleanly once per session. No blame lands on you. You were never there.

FIRST IN, FIRST OUT

When you arrive somewhere early or leave somewhere smoothly before everything goes wrong, ask the GM what you saw that no one else did.

ADVANCES

- Emotional Volatile: Once per session, have a genuine emotional reaction so specific and unexpected that everyone in the room backs down.
- The Favor Network: Name any three people in the industry. They each owe you one. Ask the GM what.
- Problem Generator, Problem Solver: When you cause a new crisis while solving another one, gain +1 forward on the new crisis immediately.
- The Pivot: When you're caught in an obvious lie, roll +CHA. On a 10+, they believe the new version. On a 7-9, they half-believe it—but that's enough.
- Improved Stat: Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

- Get someone out of a crisis of your own making.
- Be genuinely, selflessly helpful to one person who doesn't expect it.
- Go an entire session without creating a secondary problem.
- Decide, once, whether the loyalty is worth it.

You were the best assistant anyone ever had. Now you're the youngest junior executive in the building. The gap between those two sentences is the rest of your career.

NAME

Pick a name:

New Hollywood: Quinn, Sloane, Avery, Tatum / Caden, Remy, Finn, Beckett

Transplant Making It: Priya, Leila, Zara, Mia / Kofi, Emre, Deon, Piers

Ironic Industry Name: Ida, Addie, Gilda, Lila / Capra, Wilder, Hawks, Sturges

LOOK

Pick one from each row:

Energy: controlled precision with alarming depth beneath it | faster than everyone else in the room | dangerously competent for someone this age

Age: young enough to scare the executives | technically young, acting several years older | the youngest person in this meeting and everyone knows it

Eyes: sharp and recording everything | professional warmth over real assessment | briefly, nakedly ambitious, before she catches herself

Build: always in motion, even standing still | precise and economical | tired in ways that don't show yet

Outfit: business ready at all times, including weekends | thoughtfully assembled on this salary | whatever signals she belongs here

Tell: the pause before answering that means she already knows | completing your sentence correctly | loyalty you should not have relied on this heavily

Pick one.

THE BEST ASSISTANT IN THE BUILDING

You knew things before anyone told you. When you act on information you gathered through observation, proximity, or quiet diligence—without being told—take +1 forward.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you treated me differently than a typical assistant?
- Which of you didn't notice me until I stopped being an assistant?
- Which of you knows something because I told you?
- Which of you still asks me to get their coffee?

THE ETHICAL TIGHTROPE

You came in with principles. You've already bent one. When you refuse to cross a line that others are crossing, take +2 forward on the next move you make using your own judgment.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you knows where my line actually is?
- Which of you was there when I first bent the rules?
- Which of you has asked me to cross it?
- Which of you thinks I'll end up just like them?

THE FAST LEARNER

You absorb pressure and convert it to efficiency. When something genuinely terrible happens and you stay calm, roll +CON. On a 10+, choose 2. On a 7-9, choose 1:

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- The crisis timeline compresses
- Which of you panicked and I covered for them?
- You identify the one person who can actually fix this
- Which of you thought I was cold for not breaking down?
- You avoid blame
- Which of you has mistaken my efficiency for not caring?
- You learn who breaks under pressure
- Which of you actually asked me how I was doing?

STARTING MOVES

THE PROTÉGÉ'S GAMBIT

When you execute a complex logistical task—scheduling, redirecting resources, solving a problem before anyone asks—roll +INT. On a 10+, it's done before anyone knew it was a problem. On a 7-9, it's done, but you've made one decision that wasn't yours to make.

SYSTEMIC OPTIMIZATION

When you spend time working out how a system—a project, a schedule, a person's routine—actually operates, ask the GM one question about its weakest point.

IDEALISM INTACT

As long as you haven't compromised your core values yet this session, take +1 ongoing to any move made in service of a genuinely good creative outcome.

ORGANIZATIONAL SABOTAGE

When you redirect, delay, or quietly neutralize someone else's plan without them noticing, roll +INT. On a 10+, they don't notice. On a 7-9, they don't notice yet.

ADVANCES

- The Jaded Turn: Once per session, make a move as if you had no principles left. It's more effective. Nobody can call you on it yet.
- Mentor's Successor: When you are the most competent person in the room and there's no one above you, take +2 forward on all Discern Realities moves.
- The Long Rope: Once per session, someone gives you more autonomy than they intended. Use it before they notice.
- Calendar Control: You control one schedule per session completely. The person whose schedule it is doesn't find out until it's done.
- Improved Stat: Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

- Do something genuinely important that you'll get no credit for.
- Stay yourself while doing everything that is asked of you.
- Call someone out for treating you like you still work for them.
- Choose between the right call and the safe call.

Presence: entering every room like you still own it | effortlessly intimidating | deceptively warm until you're not

Age: old enough to have forgotten more than they know | wearing the decades like armor | carrying experience as a weapon

Eyes: evaluating everyone at all times | briefly, genuinely tender | the eyes of someone who has fired excellent people

Outfit: immaculate and expensive, always | casually wearing something that costs more than their salary | dressed down to make you underestimate her

Tell: unsettling stillness before speaking | the compliment that is also a threat | calling everyone "darling" at slightly different warmth levels

Pick one.

THE OUSTED HEAD

You built this studio and were removed by a CEO who didn't understand what you'd built. When you reveal institutional knowledge no one else could have, the room defers to your authority—even the people who replaced you.

- When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:*
- Which of you worked under me before?
 - Which of you voted to keep me?
 - Which of you knew I was being pushed out and said nothing?
 - Which of you thinks I deserved it?

THE RELUCTANT MENTOR

- You never wanted to teach. Teaching implied succession, which implied departure. When you give someone genuinely honest advice—the kind it costs you to share—take +1 forward on any action taken together with them this session.
- When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:*
- Which of you has been asking me for advice and getting only half of it?
 - Which of you do I secretly want to succeed?
 - Which of you reminds me of myself in a way I find uncomfortable?
 - Which of you would I sacrifice to protect my own position?

THE COMEBACK ARC

- You have done this before and survived it. When you've already failed at something this session and attempt it again, roll +WIS instead of whichever stat applies.
- When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:*
- Which of you underestimated me?
 - Which of you believed in me when I stopped believing in myself?
 - Which of you told a journalist I was finished?
 - Which of you is waiting for me to fail again?

STARTING MOVES

THE BITTER MENTOR

When you share genuine industry intelligence with someone—real costs, real names, real risks—you may give them +2 forward. But: name what it costs you. Reputation, a relationship, or the admission that you need them.

MASTERY OF ROOMS

When you walk into a professional space and take control of it, roll +WIS. On a 10+, choose 2. On a 7-9, choose 1:

- Everyone assumes you belong here
- No one contradicts you until you've finished speaking
- You identify the person actually in charge
- You spot the exit before you need it

THE LONG GAME

When you sacrifice something today to position for something bigger, write down what you gave up. Ask the GM when it pays off.

MEAT GRINDER MEMORY

Once per session, you can tell someone exactly how a situation ends—based on having seen it before. You're right about the shape of it, even if the details differ.

INDUSTRY LORE

When you Discern Realities about studio politics, industry relationships, or the history of a project, ask one extra question.

ADVANCES

- Absolute Authority: Once per session, issue a directive. Anyone below CEO level follows it without question.
- Old Loyalties: Name any person in the industry. They owe you something. Ask the GM what.
- Scar Tissue: When you take psychological damage from a professional humiliation, it heals in the next scene—no roll needed.
- The Exit Interview: Once per campaign, declare you're done with someone professionally. They cannot directly hinder you again for the rest of the session.
- Improved Stat: Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one stat by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

Optional Moves — The Studio

Jednostronicowa karta ruchów opcjonalnych do settingu.

THE GREEN LIGHT

When the group aligns on a project—everyone commits, no one hedges—one player rolls +CHA of whoever pitched it hardest. On a 10+, choose 3. On a 7-9, choose 2:

- The CEO approves without reading the full pitch
- The budget lands at the number you needed
- Talent attaches before anyone can talk them out of it
- The room forgets who was skeptical ten minutes ago

THE WALK-AND-TALK

When the group moves through the studio lot together and uses the time to make a decision, roll +WIS of whoever is most aware of the situation. On a 10+, choose 2. On a 7-9, choose 1:

- Everyone agrees before arriving at the destination
- No one with a competing agenda overhears
- The decision is made before you have to sit down and make it official
- Someone says the true thing they've been avoiding

THE ONER

When a crisis must be resolved in real time—no preparation, no delay, no recovery—set a hard deadline. Every player must take an action before time runs out. Each failed roll makes the next person's harder. If the deadline passes, the camera captured everything.

AWARD SEASON

When the group attends a gala, premiere, or industry event where status matters, each player tracks Envy and Status separately. Winning something for the studio gains +1 Status. Not being personally thanked in an acceptance speech gains +1 Envy. At 3 Envy, your next social move is at disadvantage—and everyone in the room can see why.

TALENT MANAGEMENT

When the group must manage a difficult creative figure—fragile ego, impossible demands, actual genius—roll +CHA of whoever takes point. On a 10+, they do the work and it is remarkable. On a 7-9, they do the work, but choose one: they've rewritten something they shouldn't have, they've alienated someone essential, or they've called the CEO directly.

TABLE 1: THE SITUATION

We've just learned that

- 01 a director has gone completely off-script on the backlot
- 02 the CEO has committed the studio to a project no one approved
- 03 a major talent has had a breakdown in a public location
- 04 someone leaked the greenlight before it was announced
- 05 the film reels for tomorrow's premiere have gone missing
- 06 someone from a competing studio has infiltrated the building
- 07 a beloved franchise has lost its lead overnight
- 08 a promising director is refusing to work until demands are met
- 09 the screening cut has been replaced by something unrecognizable
- 10 a key executive has quit by email, effective immediately
- 11 the studio's best project has become legally complicated
- 12 an AI integration proposal was sent to the board without approval
- 13 a journalist has seen something they should not have seen
- 14 the backlot is being used for something it should not be used for
- 15 the CEO has invited himself to a production meeting
- 16 a tech company has made an unsolicited acquisition offer
- 17 the awards season favorite is suddenly no longer a favorite
- 18 an actor has decided to direct the film they're starring in
- 19 the official premiere date conflicts with a major competitor
- 20 an entire department has threatened to walk out by Friday

TABLE 2: THE COMPLICATION

which is complicated by the fact that

- 01 the CEO doesn't know yet and will fire someone when he finds out
- 02 the talent involved is the studio's most important relationship
- 03 it was technically your idea to begin with
- 04 there is a camera crew nearby
- 05 the person who can fix it is not speaking to the person who caused it
- 06 the deadline is in forty-eight hours
- 07 someone else has already promised the opposite
- 08 it's been going on for three weeks and no one said anything
- 09 the only solution requires money that doesn't exist
- 10 it became public on social media four hours ago
- 11 there are two competing versions of events and neither is fully accurate
- 12 fixing it requires someone to admit something they've denied
- 13 the person responsible doesn't think it's a problem
- 14 you've handled this exact crisis before, and failed
- 15 legal is involved and they are not being helpful
- 16 the press has been invited to a related event tomorrow morning
- 17 the executive who could approve the solution is on a plane
- 18 doing nothing is technically the safest option
- 19 the CEO has an opinion and it is wrong
- 20 fixing it will solve one problem and create three others

TABLE 3: THE ASK

and we need to

- 01 convince someone to stay calm about something genuinely alarming
- 02 delay a decision without appearing to delay it
- 03 find out what actually happened and from whom
- 04 get a powerful person to take the blame voluntarily
- 05 locate something that has physically disappeared
- 06 prevent two people from speaking to each other for the next twelve hours
- 07 produce a creative solution with forty-eight hours and no budget
- 08 manage a story so it becomes the story we want
- 09 protect the project without protecting the person who endangered it
- 10 get a decision reversed without the CEO knowing it was reversed
- 11 replace something irreplaceable
- 12 tell a very important person something they do not want to hear
- 13 get everyone into the same room who has been avoiding the same room
- 14 hold together a team that has stopped trusting each other
- 15 negotiate something without appearing to negotiate
- 16 make a catastrophic failure look like a pivot
- 17 get out of the building before a meeting we technically scheduled
- 18 finish something that was never started
- 19 present to the CEO tomorrow with a plan that doesn't exist yet
- 20 preserve the artistic vision of someone who is actively destroying it

TABLE 4: THE ASSET

using

- 01 a favor from someone who assumed we'd never call it in
- 02 an unused location on the backlot and two days
- 03 footage that was supposed to be destroyed
- 04 a relationship that hasn't been tested yet
- 05 a meeting that no one remembers scheduling
- 06 the studio's last goodwill with a major distribution partner
- 07 a document that may or may not be legally binding
- 08 someone who owes everyone in this room something different
- 09 an invitation to a private event that arrived without explanation
- 10 the CEO's assistant, who is more powerful than the CEO
- 11 a pitch that was rejected eighteen months ago
- 12 a director who has never worked with this studio and is available now
- 13 the fact that no one has actually read the contract
- 14 a screening room booked under a different title
- 15 someone who has just been fired and has nothing left to lose
- 16 the original vision document before anyone changed it
- 17 a connection at the competing studio who is dissatisfied
- 18 forty-five minutes before the CEO returns from lunch
- 19 a performance that, shown to the right person at the right time, changes everything
- 20 the truth, carefully edited

TABLE 5: THE OBSTACLE

despite

- 01 a talent who has decided this is the hill they die on
- 02 a CEO directive that technically applies to this exact situation
- 03 a journalist who is in the wrong place at the wrong time
- 04 someone in the group whose approach makes everything worse
- 05 a creative decision made before anyone thought it through
- 06 the fact that the solution requires violating someone's trust
- 07 a legal hold that nobody here is authorized to lift
- 08 a producer on a competing project who is watching closely
- 09 a studio tour group currently on the relevant lot
- 10 a technology failure that has been escalating for three days
- 11 a public statement made before the facts were clear
- 12 the most important person in the room being in active denial
- 13 an assistant who is taking very good notes
- 14 a non-disclosure agreement that may or may not be enforceable
- 15 a talent attachment that created problems when it was announced
- 16 a competing vision of what this project should be
- 17 someone who thinks the real problem is something entirely different
- 18 a decision made by committee and therefore with no owner
- 19 a previous version of this exact problem that was never resolved
- 20 the camera filming a behind-the-scenes documentary of this project

TABLE 6: THE STAKES

and if we fail

- 01 the studio's most important project loses its director.
- 02 the CEO hears about it from someone other than us.
- 03 the relationship with the most important talent in the building is over.
- 04 a competing studio acquires what we were trying to protect.
- 05 the artistic vision we've been defending is lost permanently.
- 06 a journalist publishes the version of events we didn't want published.
- 07 a project that should never have been greenlit actually gets made.
- 08 the studio takes the hit, and we take credit for the hit.
- 09 an exec who doesn't deserve it takes the fall for something we caused.
- 10 the tech company offer starts to look reasonable to the board.
- 11 the film we greenlit never gets made because we protected the wrong thing.
- 12 the studio is exactly what everyone always said it was.
- 13 the one person who still believed in us stops believing.
- 14 we prove that we are, in fact, the suits everyone accused us of being.
- 15 the best thing this studio ever produced never gets finished.
- 16 the creative team disbands over something we could have prevented.
- 17 the CEO uses this as the reason he was already looking for.
- 18 three years of reputation dissolves in a forty-eight-hour news cycle.
- 19 the film comes out without the soul it started with.
- 20 we never find out if it would have been great.
