

ROAD WARDEN

The roads don't guard themselves. Between settlements is where the Empire thins out — where bandits set up toll-points, where mutants come down from the hills, where something from the forest has been taking livestock and is working its way up in ambition. You know what lives out there. You're still going out there anyway.

NAME

Pick a name:

Human (Reikland): Aldric, Brennan, Curt, Dirk / Hanna, Isolde, Lena, Marte

Human (Averland): Lukas, Oswin, Reiker, Volf / Berta, Gerta, Milla, Petra

Halfling: Barley, Guff, Smit, Tuck / Daisy, Nelly, Prudie, Wynn

Elf: Aethis, Celeban, Daelan, Faerin / Aislin, Caelith, Liriel, Sable

LOOK

Pick one from each row:

People: Reiklander Human | Averlander Human | Halfling | Wood Elf | ask the table

Bearing: calm and unshockable | wary from a thousand bad nights | friendly until proven wrong | exactly as tired as you'd expect

Eyes: always scanning the tree line | already calculating exits | kind but never fully at rest | mapped every face in this inn already

Build: weather-hardened and practical | rangy and built for long hours in the saddle | stocky and planted | thin but enduring

Clothing: Empire patrol colors, faded | traveling leathers with no insignia | patched uniform with personal additions | whatever was clean and didn't draw attention

Signature: a notched patrol sword with too many notches | road maps covered in personal notes | a wanted poster collection | a battered imperial warrant medallion

BACKGROUND

Pick one.

VETERAN PATROL

You have ridden this stretch of road for years. When you approach any settlement, inn, toll road, or crossroads in the Empire, ask the GM one: who has passed through recently, what is the local danger right now, or who is watching this place.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you have I stopped and questioned before?
- Which of you travels these roads more than they should?
- Which of you has information I have been trying to find?
- Which of you knows someone I am still looking for?

SURVIVOR OF THE ROAD

You have walked away from an ambush, a Beastman raid, or worse — and you know now what survival requires. When you are ambushed or caught in a trap, you are never surprised. You act in the first round regardless.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you was there when it happened?
- Which of you is still making the mistake I made that day?
- Which of you knows the story and has never brought it up?
- Which of you I'd trust to have my back if it happened again?

BANDIT NETWORK

You have cultivated informants among the criminal elements of the roads — former outlaws, toll-point operators who look the other way, roadside innkeepers with flexible loyalties. When you look for information on criminal activity along a road, roll +CHA. On a 10+, you have a contact here and they talk freely. On a 7-9, you have a contact but they want something first.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you is on a list I keep inside my coat?
- Which of you thinks my methods are too permissive?
- Which of you has used one of my contacts for their own ends?
- Which of you have I let go with a warning once?

BEAST TRACKER

You have learned to read what comes down from the forests — Beastmen, mutants, Chaos-touched wildlife — from the marks they leave on the land. When you study a trail, carcass, or disturbed site for signs of creature activity, the GM tells you: what made it, how many, how recently, and which direction they went.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has followed me into the dark and lived?
- Which of you has seen me lose a trail and knows I have been looking ever since?
- Which of you trusts my read of the land even when I don't explain it?
- Which of you carries something that came from the forest that I don't think was found there?

ROAD WARDEN

Skrót zasad i opcji postaci do gry przy stole.

STARTING MOVES

KNOW THE ROAD

When you travel between two settlements on a road you have patrolled, you arrive without incident unless you choose to investigate something along the way. You know the roads, the shortcuts, and where the dangers sit.

PATROL STRIKE

When you attack with a road weapon — sword, lance, crossbow — from horseback or from a prepared position, deal your damage and add +1d4 if your target did not know you were there.

IMPERIAL WARRANT

When you invoke your authority as a Road Warden to stop, search, or detain someone on imperial roads, roll +CHA. On a 10+, they comply without trouble. On a 7-9, they comply but are hostile, slow, or have already hidden what you're looking for.

HARD MILES

You do not get lost on imperial roads, even in darkness, heavy fog, or after an ambush. When you guide a group through road travel under difficult conditions, they arrive safely.

READ THE THREAT

When you observe a group of people on the road and assess them for danger, roll +WIS. On a 10+, ask three questions from the standard list. On a 7-9, ask one.

WILDERNESS SHELTER

When you make camp off-road in the Empire's wild spaces, roll +WIS. On a 10+, you find a safe site and your group recovers as if resting at an inn. On a 7-9, the site is safe but something out there knows you are here.

ADVANCES

- Mounted Combat Mastery: When fighting from horseback, your damage die improves by one step, and your horse acts on your initiative.
- Road Network: You have contacts at every major coaching inn between two cities of your choice. They will feed you, shelter you, and pass messages for free.
- Outlaw Knowledge: You know the faces, habits, and territories of every active bandit group in one region. The GM will always tell you if you recognize a criminal.
- First Responder: When you arrive at a scene of violence or chaos and take charge, all NPCs present treat your orders as legitimate authority.
- Fortified Position: When you have time to prepare a defensive position, you and your allies gain +1 armor while defending it.
- Improved Stat: Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

- Keep a road safe that someone else gave up on.
- Find what is preying on travelers and end it.
- Protect someone who cannot afford protection.
- Discover what the bandits are actually working for.

ROGUE

Not everyone who makes it in the Empire does it clean. The guilds want their cut. The law bends for the wealthy. The docks, the alleys, the underground passages between warehouse districts — you know all of it. You've lived it. And knowing it is worth more than people think.

Bearing: relaxed until it matters | always moving slightly | watching and not being watched | affably dishonest

Eyes: clocking exits | adding up the value of everything | reading the room | already somewhere else

Build: compact and quick | lean and good at disappearing | small and nearly invisible | wiry and patient

Clothing: dock worker's layers hiding too many pockets | respectable merchant's clothing, very slightly wrong | guild uniform you're not supposed to have | nothing that stands out on purpose

Signature: lockpicks worn on a bracelet | a knife gifted by someone you robbed | a list of contacts in a code only you use | a bruise in a place that means something

BACKGROUND

Pick one.

GUILD THIEF

You were trained by a thieves' guild — pick a city. You know the signs, passwords, and protocols. When you enter a settlement, you can find the local guild contact without rolling. They will give you work, safe house access, and information about local marks — for a cut.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has something I already appraised while we were talking?
- Which of you has already noticed I took something?
- Which of you knows the same guild I do, but from the other side?
- Which of you owes the same people I owe?

STREET INFORMANT

You have contacts among the city's forgotten: beggars, dock workers, sewer cleaners, street children. When you ask around about someone or something in a settlement, roll +CHA. On a 10+, your network delivers accurate information freely. On a 7-9, the information is real but partial, or the contact needs a favor first.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has asked me for information before and didn't ask where I got it?
- Which of you have I been asked to report on, and have declined so far?
- Which of you knows someone who knows me, and doesn't know it?
- Which of you knows a part of this city I have never been able to map?

FENCE AND DEALER

You know how goods move. When you want to sell something — stolen, unusual, or legally ambiguous — roll +CHA. On a 10+, you find a buyer, get fair value, and no awkward questions are asked. On a 7-9, you find a buyer, but they want to know its provenance, or they offer significantly below value.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has sold me something without knowing what it was worth?
- Which of you am I currently working for, without them knowing?
- Which of you is carrying something I recognize from a job list?
- Which of you trusts my appraisal more than their own judgment?

ESCAPED DEBTOR

Someone important wants something from you — money, a favor, or information — and you are running. When you are in a settlement, you can sense when someone connected to your debt is near, without rolling. You always know when to leave before they see you.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you knew me before I had this problem?
- Which of you has covered for me at least once?
- Which of you knows the shape of it without knowing the details?
- Which of you do I worry will be used against me?

STARTING MOVES

PICKPOCKET

When you attempt to take something from someone without them noticing, roll +DEX. On a 10+, you have it and they don't know. On a 7-9, you have it, but choose one: they notice something's wrong, they're watching you now, or you'll need to move quickly.

DARK ALLEY

When you attack from hiding or close range without warning, roll +DEX. On a 10+, deal your damage and you remain hidden or can flee before retaliation. On a 7-9, deal your damage but you are exposed.

READ THE MARK

When you observe someone and assess what they're worth — financially, informationally, or as leverage — roll +WIS. On a 10+, ask two: What do they value most? What are they hiding? What would make them cooperate? What is their weakness? On a 7-9, ask one.

BLENDING IN

When you adopt a disguise, role, or false identity, roll +CHA. On a 10+, you are convincing for the scene unless you do something to break it. On a 7-9, you're convincing until someone looks closely or asks the wrong question.

CITYWISE

In any city or large town you have visited before, you always know where to find: a black market, a fence, a safe house, or a corrupt official. No roll needed.

SECOND EXIT

When you enter a building, room, or enclosed space, ask the GM: where's the other way out? They tell you. It's always there.

ADVANCES

- Master Pickpocket: You never roll for Pickpocket in crowds or when the mark is distracted.
- The Guild Owes Me: Once per session, call in a favor from a criminal organization. They provide muscle, information, passage, or a distraction — nothing that gets them killed.
- Knife Work: When you deal damage with a small weapon (dagger, knife, hidden blade), deal +1d4 damage.
- Con Artist: When you tell a deliberate lie and roll +CHA, a 7+ always gets you out of immediate trouble. The long-term consequences are the GM's to invent.
- Urban Predator: When you track a person through a city, you never lose them unless magic is involved.
- Improved Stat: Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

- Get paid more than the job was worth.
- Find something that gives you leverage over someone powerful.
- Get out of a situation that should have been impossible to escape.
- Protect someone small from someone large, for a change.

TROLLSLAYER

You have done something that cannot be undone. You swore the Oath, shaved your head and dyed what remains, and now you seek a death worthy of the shame you carry. Something big. Something that takes you with it.

NAME

Pick a name:

Dwarf (only): Gotrek, Ungrim, Borin, Drengi / Helga, Dagni, Berta, Skarla

LOOK

Pick one from each row:

People: Dwarf — there is no other ancestry for a Slayer

Bearing: bellowing and alive | quietly furious | oddly calm about all of it | talking to death like it owes you a favor

Eyes: bright with the joy of ending | flat and far away | searching for something worthy | weeping without knowing it

Build: short and impossibly broad | knotted like old rope | scarred from crown to boot | vibrating with barely contained violence

Crest: the orange crest is freshly waxed | the orange crest is scorched at the edges | the orange crest has something braided into it you don't talk about | the crest is older than it looks

Marks: tattoos cover every visible surface | only the oath-scar, plain and deep | enough iron rings to weigh down a lesser being | a clan-sigil burned over, unrecognizable now

Pick one.

OATHBREAKER

You broke a vow you made before your ancestors. The specifics are yours alone. What matters is: the shame cannot be unmade, and neither can you. When you charge into combat against a creature bigger or more dangerous than yourself and sustain a wound in doing so, mark XP.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you knows what I did?
- Which of you thinks you could have done better in my place?
- Which of you asked and was told to mind their own?
- Which of you has seen me almost die and seemed relieved I didn't?

KINSLAYER

Your shame is worse than most. You do not speak of it. When you fight alongside an ally who is in true danger — unconscious, outnumbered, or about to die — you may throw yourself between them and the harm without a roll. You take the hit. No questions. No hesitation.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you knows enough to never ask?
- Which of you treats me with a pity I find intolerable?
- Which of you saved my life without understanding why that makes things worse?
- Which of you looked me in the eye and said nothing, and I respected that?

DRAGONSLAYER ASPIRANT

You have already killed things most adepts never survive: trolls, giants, daemons of modest power. When you identify a creature as your next worthy death — bigger, badder, or more dangerous than anything you have faced before — take +1 forward on all moves against it for the rest of the session.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has watched me pick my target and known there was no stopping me?
- Which of you is quietly hoping I don't?
- Which of you thinks I will find my worthy death before this journey ends?
- Which of you has killed something alongside me and knows it felt wrong that we both walked away?

ELDER SLAYER

You have been walking this road long enough that younger Slayers have heard of you. Your name carries weight in Slayer lodges. When you walk into a Slayer lodge or announce your deeds to other dwarfs, they treat you as something between legend and warning. Ask the GM what they know of you here.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has heard my name somewhere else before we met?
- Which of you wonders why I am still alive after this long?
- Which of you thinks I am a cautionary tale rather than an inspiration?
- Which of you is the reason I'm still here, whether they know it or not?

STARTING MOVES

DEATH WISH

When you charge into combat outnumbered or against a creature larger than yourself, deal your damage and take +1 armor against the first attack that hits you. You may not flee from this fight without dishonor.

BORN TO END THINGS

When you deal the killing blow to a creature of significant size or power, immediately recover 1d6 HP.

GRUDGE BEARER

When something or someone wrongs you or your companions, name it. You deal +1d6 damage against that creature or person for the rest of the session. You may only carry one active Grudge at a time.

UNBREAKABLE

When you would be knocked unconscious or killed by a single blow, roll +CON. On a 10+, you take the damage but stay standing — barely. On a 7-9, you go down but do not die; you may act one final time before losing consciousness.

OLD SCARS

Your body is a map of every fight you have survived. When someone tries to intimidate or manipulate you through threats of bodily harm, it does not work. At all.

TROLL KILLER

You know exactly how trolls work. When you fight a troll, stone troll, river troll, or similar regenerating creature, your attacks always prevent regeneration, and you deal +1d4 damage on a hit.

ADVANCES

- Daemon Slayer Reputation: When you enter combat against a daemonic entity, all other Chaos creatures in the area must roll or flee.
- Nothing Left to Lose: Once per session, when you would die, you don't. The GM decides the cost — broken bone, lost gear, a terrible wound — but you live. This time.
- Massive Blow: Once per combat, when you hit with a melee weapon, you may choose to deal maximum damage instead of rolling.
- Endure: When you are poisoned, diseased, or otherwise physically afflicted, treat the condition as one severity lower than it is.
- Worthy Death Magnetism: At the start of each session, declare one creature type as your nemesis. The GM will ensure that creature type appears at some point this session.
- Improved Stat: Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

- Die fighting something that deserves to kill you.
- Protect someone who cannot protect themselves, even though you're not supposed to care.
- Find something big enough to be worthy of the Oath.
- Honor the Oath by never, ever running.

WITCH HUNTER

You have seen what Chaos does to men. You have watched the innocent weep as they confessed, and the guilty smile as they burned. You carry their names with you — every one.

NAME

Pick a name:

Human (Reikland): Johann, Ruprecht, Klaus, Konrad / Elise, Marta, Hildegard, Greta

Human (Middenland): Ulric, Brand, Harkon, Veit / Sigrid, Freya, Edda, Runa

Halfling: Pip, Jasper, Merric, Toby / Rosie, Lily, Dot, Bree

Dwarf: Gundrun, Borek, Thordal, Keldek / Brenna, Hilda, Dagni, Sigra

LOOK

Pick one from each row:

People: Imperial Human | Middenlander | Halfling | Dwarf | ask the table

Bearing: cold and watchful | furious but controlled | piously rigid | hollowed out by the work

Eyes: like a man who has seen too much | searching every face for sin | calm before a verdict | lit from within by something that isn't comfort

Build: lean and road-hardened | broad-shouldered under a heavy coat | slight but unbreakable | stooped under invisible weight

Clothing: long black coat and wide-brimmed hat | travel-worn vestments hiding armor | formal robes with the hammer sigil | something practical and conspicuously plain

Signature: a copy of the Malleus worn to softness | a collection of sealed confessions | a branded palm from an early test of faith | a list of names that grows longer

BACKGROUND

Pick one.

TEMPLAR OF SIGMAR

You carry a Sigmarite writ of authority signed in Altdorf. When you formally invoke your authority to imperial citizens, officials, or soldiers, they cannot legally refuse your demands for aid, information, or access — though they may delay, misdirect, or quietly warn your targets.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has seen me burn someone who deserved it?
- Which of you knows what I am looking for on this road?
- Which of you thinks I have gone too far at least once?
- Which of you helped me once and never asked what I found?

CONFESSOR'S SHADOW

You were trained to extract truth from those who do not wish to give it. When you interrogate a prisoner or examine someone for signs of corruption, roll +WIS. On a 10+, you learn what you need to know, and you may choose whether the subject remains cooperative afterward. On a 7-9, you learn the truth, but something — evidence, a relationship, an innocent's dignity — is damaged in the process.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you knows someone I have questioned before?
- Which of you thinks I take too much satisfaction in this work?
- Which of you has sat on the other side of my methods?
- Which of you trusts my judgment less than my results?

HERETIC HUNTER

You have catalogued the signs, sigils, and rituals of every Chaos cult operating in the Empire. When you examine a crime scene, a body, or a strange event for evidence of cult activity, the GM tells you: which cult, what they were doing, and what they left behind.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has killed a cultist before I could find them?
- Which of you knows I am already on a trail?
- Which of you has something in their possession I have seen in cult hands before?
- Which of you has been mistaken for a cultist by someone like me?

SURVIVOR OF CORRUPTION

Someone close to you fell to Chaos, and you did what had to be done. You are immune to the fear and revulsion others feel when confronting mutation and Chaos taint — you have already seen the worst of it on a face you loved. When you act to protect others from Chaos taint at personal cost, mark XP.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you knows what I lost?
- Which of you has seen me hesitate when it mattered?
- Which of you lost someone too, and chose a different path?
- Which of you is watching me for signs that the taint found me too?

STARTING MOVES

WITCH SENSE

When you study a person, place, or object for signs of Chaos corruption, roll +WIS. On a 10+, the GM tells you clearly: is it tainted, how deeply, and what power left the mark. On a 7-9, you get a strong impression — tainted or clean — but the details are incomplete or deeply unsettling.

CONFESS

When you confront someone with evidence of their sin and demand the truth, roll +CHA. On a 10+, they tell you what you need to know. On a 7-9, they tell you something true — but not everything, and they now fear or hate you for asking.

PYRE'S EDGE

When you attack a confirmed servant of Chaos — a cultist, mutant, daemonhost, or corruption-bearer — deal your damage and take +1 forward against them for the rest of the scene.

UNBREAKABLE WILL

When you face magical compulsion, daemonic terror, or Chaos-spawned psychological assault, take +1 to resist. On a 12+, you are immune to that specific source for the remainder of the encounter.

READ A CROWD

When you observe a gathering of people for hidden guilt, loyalty, or cult activity, roll +WIS. On a 10+, pick two: who is afraid, who is lying, who is a leader, or who is marking you. On a 7-9, pick one.

SILVER AND FIRE

Your weapons deal full damage to daemons, the undead, and Chaos-tainted creatures regardless of mundane defenses they might possess.

ADVANCES

- Burning Conviction: When you deal damage to a servant of Chaos, you may add your WIS modifier to the damage.
- Network of Informants: In any imperial settlement, you can spend time to make contact with local informants. They know one secret about the powerful, the corrupt, or the hidden.
- Torturer's Knowledge: When you use Confess on someone who is physically restrained, you always get the full truth, no roll needed — but the GM may have consequences follow you.
- Daemon-Ward: You carry or wear a sigil blessed by a Sigmarite priest. Daemons and summoned entities suffer -1 ongoing against you.
- No Mercy: When you kill a confirmed servant of Chaos, you may immediately make a free attack against a second target in reach.
- Improved Stat: Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

- Expose a cult before it can complete its ritual.
- Burn something that should not have been allowed to live.
- Protect the innocent from a threat they cannot see.
- Face your own potential for sin and choose the harder path.

- Eyes: tracking the Wind even as you speak | lit from a color no one else sees | glazed with calculation | occasionally somewhere else entirely
- Build: scholar-lean | hunched under heavy robes | tall and formally composed | soft and startlingly quick
- Clothing: College robes in your Wind's color | travelling clothes under a formal over-robe | charred and patched in ways you don't explain | deliberately plain to avoid attention
- Signature: a focus item no one else can touch without your permission | ink-stained fingers that never fully wash | a spell component case worn as a necklace | the faint smell of your Wind lingering around you always

BACKGROUND

Pick one.

BRIGHT ORDER ALUMNUS

You were trained in the Bright College — Fire, Aqshy, the Red Wind. When you call fire or heat against a target, your spells set things alight on a hit, dealing ongoing burn damage until the fire is extinguished. You cannot cast Ice or Death magic without risk of Miscast.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you has seen what happens when I lose control?
- Which of you is afraid of fire for reasons that have nothing to do with me?
- Which of you knows what I left behind in Altdorf?
- Which of you did I test with flame once, and they passed?

CELESTIAL WAYFINDER

You were trained in the Celestial College — Stars, Azyr, the Blue Wind. When you study the night sky, a star chart, or the patterns of a region, roll +INT. On a 10+, the GM tells you one thing about what is coming in this area — a threat, a turning point, or an opportunity — that no one else would know. On a 7-9, you get an impression but not certainty.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you have I seen in my charts before I met them in person?
- Which of you does not want to know what I saw about their future?
- Which of you is not supposed to be here, and I haven't decided whether to say so?
- Which of you has changed something I thought was fixed?

JADE DRUID

You were trained in the Jade College — Life, Ghyran, the Green Wind. When you touch someone who is injured and spend a few minutes in quiet focus, they recover 1d8 HP. When you are in natural terrain — forests, fields, rivers — you feel the Green Wind strongly and take +1 to all moves.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you came to me when the healers were out of answers?
- Which of you have I seen damaged in a way that my Wind cannot reach?
- Which of you thinks what I do is just hedge witchery with a College degree?
- Which of you does the Green Wind warn me about, and I haven't decided what that means yet?

GREY SCHOLAR

You were trained in the Grey College — Shadows, Ulgu, the Grey Wind. When you are in shadow, fog, or darkness, you can move without being detected — no roll needed unless magic is involved. When you read a person for hidden intent, roll +INT. On a 10+, they cannot hide anything from you with words alone.

When you introduce yourself to the other PCs, ask one or more of the following:

- Which of you did I follow without them knowing, before we formally met?
- Which of you has spoken freely in a room they thought was empty?
- Which of you knows I am not always where I appear to be?
- Which of you has seen me step out of a shadow and is still not used to it?

STARTING MOVES

CHANNEL THE WIND

When you draw on your Wind of Magic to cast a spell, roll +INT. On a 10+, the spell works as intended. On a 7-9, the spell works but the GM chooses one: the effect is weakened, it is reduced in scope, or you draw dangerous attention from something that senses magic.

MISCAST WARNING

When you push your magic beyond your training — casting twice in quick succession, using a forbidden combination, or reaching for a Wind not your own — roll +INT. On a 7-9, the miscast is minor. On a 6-, something goes wrong that no one present will enjoy.

ARCANE KNOWLEDGE

When you study a magical item, creature, or phenomenon and consult your training, roll +INT. On a 10+, ask three questions about it from the standard list. On a 7-9, ask one, and the GM may ask something of you in return.

WARD

When you spend a few minutes inscribing a ward on a location, person, or object, it becomes resistant to one type of harm you specify: fire, cold, Chaos taint, undeath, or similar. The ward lasts until it is triggered or dispelled.

READ THE WINDS

You can sense when magic has been cast nearby, even if you did not witness it. The GM will always tell you when magical residue is present and roughly what kind of power was involved.

SCHOLARLY NETWORK

In any Imperial city with a College presence, you can find a fellow wizard. Roll +INT when you reach out. On a 10+, they help freely. On a 7-9, they help but there are strings — academic politics, past debts, or an uncomfortable question they want answered first.

ADVANCES

- Mastered Wind: Your signature Wind magic no longer risks Miscast on a 7-9 result.
- Counterspell: When you identify an ongoing magical effect, you may attempt to dispel it by rolling +INT. On a 10+, it ends. On a 7-9, it fades but not without a backlash.
- Greater Ward: Your wards can now protect against multiple damage types simultaneously.
- Arcane Sight: You can always see active magical effects, enchanted items, and Chaos taint without rolling, even in darkness.
- Power Tap: Once per scene, you may enhance a spell without risk of Miscast by spending 1d6 HP.
- Improved Stat: Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +2.
- Superior Stat (Requires: Improved Stat, at least one other advance): Increase one of your stats by +1, to a max of +3.

DRIVES

- Use magic to solve a problem that brute force cannot reach.
- Understand something forbidden that should stay forbidden.
- Protect the people around you from the cost of your power.
- Keep the Winds in balance when someone else is tearing them apart.

TABLE 1: ACTION & LOCATION

We discover
01	a coaching inn that stopped sending its weekly report three weeks ago
02	a village whose entire population converted to Chaos overnight
03	an imperial watchtower, unmanned, with signs of a rapid evacuation
04	a mine beneath a Dwarf hold, reopened by something that wasn't the Dwarfs
05	a Skaven warren entrance beneath a merchant district's newest building
06	a flagellant mob moving through the countryside in total silence
07	a shrine to a god nobody in the area recognizes
08	a noble's estate sealed from the inside, with lights still burning
09	a hidden print shop producing seditious religious pamphlets
10	a river barge carrying cargo that shifts when no one is watching
11	a Chaos warband camp only half a day's ride from the nearest city gate
12	an Elven waystone that has begun pulsing with the wrong color
13	a traveling circus that appears in towns a day before the killings start
14	a mass grave outside a village, dug by the villagers themselves
15	a secret meeting of witch hunters who are not acting like witch hunters
16	a road where every traveler in the last month has vanished without trace
17	a Black Ark messenger who does not know his message is already out of date
18	a Grail chapel in the middle of Reikland that has no business being there
19	an alchemist's tower intact in the middle of a devastated region
20	a letter bearing the Grand Theogonist's seal that was never meant to be found

TABLE 2: PLACEMENT & GEOGRAPHY

which lies
01	at the edge of the Reikwald, where the road ends without warning
02	inside the walls of a city that has closed its gates to all travelers
03	beneath a Dwarf ancestor shrine abandoned during the last war
04	along the Reik, where the current has been running wrong for a week
05	at the foot of the Grey Mountains in disputed border territory
06	in the middle of the Moot, which has never been a place for trouble before
07	at a crossroads that appears on no current imperial map
08	beneath the oldest district of a city, accessible only through the sewers
09	above a village that has been there for two hundred years and nobody knows it
10	between two minor noble estates that have been quietly at war for a decade
11	at the mouth of a cave system marked with pre-Imperial stonework
12	inside a Sigmarite temple that has not opened its doors in a fortnight
13	along a stretch of road where the coaching inns all closed in the same month
14	at the top of a hill that local children are forbidden from climbing
15	in the Ostland, where the Norscan raids have been more frequent than usual
16	beneath a market square that floods every spring and shouldn't
17	at a river ford where the toll collector's booth has been empty for days
18	inside a locked archive in the Imperial Palace of Records in Altdorf
19	on a barge moored at a wharf no legitimate trade uses
20	in the middle of Averheim, in a building everyone agrees has always been there

TABLE 3: TARGET

leading to
01	the abandoned lower district of a city that was sealed after a plague that officially never happened.
02	a vault beneath a Sigmarite temple that predates the temple by three centuries.
03	a hidden college of unsanctioned magic operating in an abandoned canal district.
04	the burned-out estate of a witch hunter whose case was never officially closed.
05	a chamber beneath a Dwarf hold where the ale has been going stale for a reason.
06	a Skaven breeding pit that has been supplying the local rat population for fifty years.
07	a ruined Chaos fortress on the border that the Empire has been slowly rebuilding from the inside.
08	a Beastmen herdstone at the center of a forest that has been growing faster than forests should.
09	the private archive of a dead Elector Count whose papers should have been destroyed.
10	an underground river connecting three separate criminal organizations.
11	a Chaos cult's inner sanctum hidden beneath a legitimate merchant's counting house.
12	the estate of a noble family whose servants never leave and whose guests never come back.
13	a collapsed section of the Altdorf sewers where something has been collecting tolls in the dark.
14	a Kislevite refugee camp that has been growing for months and never quite getting smaller.
15	the ruins of a village nobody officially admits ever existed.
16	an Elven enclave that has gone from aloof to completely unreachable.
17	a Nurgle shrine hidden inside a hospice that has recently become very successful.
18	a printing house run by Chaos sympathizers inside the walls of a major city.
19	a hidden dock beneath the city where certain ships unload before official inspection.
20	an imperial garrison that has been sending routine reports for six months without casualties, patrols, or requests for resupply.

TABLE 4: PURPOSE & MISSION

We are here to
01	find the source of the corruption before the next Elector Count's council meeting
02	extract a prisoner who knows something they should not have found out
03	deliver a sealed order that must not be read before it arrives
04	confirm that the cult has been destroyed and not just gone quiet
05	protect a witness until they can testify before someone with authority to act
06	locate a missing witch hunter whose last report named people still in power
07	destroy the herdstone before the Beastmen complete the ritual at dark of moon
08	retrieve the Runefang taken from the Elector Count's vaults last week
09	negotiate passage through a warlord's territory before the army needs to use it
10	burn the records before the wrong people can read them
11	investigate the village before the Empire sends soldiers and makes everything worse
12	find out who in the city watch is working for the other side
13	get the last surviving priest out before the cult returns to finish the job
14	identify which noble family is funding the Chaos warband before they can deny it
15	clear the road for a supply column that cannot be delayed
16	find the Necromancer's phylactery before dawn, when they can return to it
17	convince the Dwarfs that the Empire did not sanction what happened at the hold
18	silence the pamphlets before they cause a riot the witch hunters will exploit
19	reach the isolated farmstead and bring back whoever is still alive
20	close the gate before something finishes opening it from the other side

TABLE 5: MINOR THREATS & OBSTACLES

guarded by
01	Chaos cultists who look entirely like the dock workers they were until recently
02	a Skaven grey seer who knows we're coming and has been preparing for days
03	imperial soldiers with legitimate orders to stop exactly what we're doing
04	Beastmen who hold the forest between here and there and have been active at night
05	a corrupt witch hunter who will have us arrested before we can explain ourselves
06	hired swords working for a merchant house that prefers we don't arrive
07	a flagellant mob convinced that we are agents of Chaos
08	a vampire who controls a third of the city guard through means no one wants to verify
09	the river, which has been rising faster than the charts show it should
10	a guild blockade staffed by people who know exactly who sent us
11	a mob of citizens who have been told we're the problem
12	Greenskins who came down from the hills during the distraction we caused elsewhere
13	a Chaos spawn of modest size but considerable enthusiasm
14	an imperial bureaucracy that requires three additional forms before access is permitted
15	night goblins tunneling beneath the foundations of everywhere we need to go
16	a noble's private guard with orders to ask questions later, if at all
17	mutant refugees hiding in the ruins who have been desperate long enough to be dangerous
18	a Grey Wizard following the same trail who isn't sure whose side we're on yet
19	the local criminal organization, already paid to slow us down
20	a bound daemon locked into the only door that matters, with the key lost to time

TABLE 6: MAJOR BOSS & ANTAGONIST

and
01	a Chaos Sorcerer who has been posing as an Imperial magistrate for eleven years.
02	a Vampire Count who considers the local nobility to be a managed resource.
03	a Skaven Warlord whose plan works equally well whether we stop it or not.
04	a witch hunter who found real evidence of corruption, gave up stopping it, and started using it.
05	a High Priest of Sigmar whose faith is genuine and whose methods are something else entirely.
06	a Daemon of Tzeentch that has been inside this situation longer than anyone alive.
07	a Nurgle cult leader who genuinely believes they are healing the world.
08	a Chaos warlord from the North who is not here for conquest but for something specific.
09	a Grey Wizard who has been manipulating events toward an outcome no one else can see yet.
10	the Elector Count himself, who knows everything we are here to prevent and chose not to act.
11	a Halfling crimelord who controls enough of the city's food supply to make legal solutions very slow.
12	an ancient Chaos Dwarf artificer who has been selling weapons to both sides for thirty years.
13	a Beastmen Great Bray-Shaman calling a herd from the depths of the Reikwald.
14	a Templar of Sigmar who has been purging the innocent because that is faster than finding the guilty.
15	a Bretonnian Knight who came to help, was corrupted quietly, and has been at this for weeks.
16	a merchant prince who is funding the chaos because stability is bad for a certain kind of business.
17	a Chaos-touched child who does not know what they are and will not survive learning.
18	a Necromancer of considerable subtlety who has been preparing for thirty years.
19	a Dwarf Runelord whose grudge against the city is old enough to have caused this and legitimate enough to justify it.
20	one of our own companions, tainted since before we met, playing a role in something we do not fully understand.
